

No Crime in Tractor Deal

No crime was committed in Coffee County in disposing of a D-7 Caterpillar tractor from Grady Ziglar's district, the grand jury empaneled in Elba last week decided after an investigation. They checked a report from the state examiner's office that dealt with the sale of the tractor to the Ray Brooks Machinery Co. In their report the grand jury ruled, "that no crime was committed in Coffee County in disposing of County equipment, but that there was a misdemeanor on the part of the party concerned."

Mr. & Mrs. Jack Veal request the Clipper to allow them to express their sincere appreciation for the treatment they received from the World Insurance Co., Omaha, Nebraska. Their son, Bobby, broke his arm while on the Elba school grounds some time ago. They had a World Insurance policy costing only $1.25 per year and advise all parents to take out this policy covering their children who are attending school. Rainer & Rainer are agents for the company here.

Reason the Jack Veals favor this company so much is revealed by a letter received by them from the company. It said:

"Dear Mr. Veal: We are happy to send you our draft for $350.85 because of your son's serious injury, representing reimbursement of expenses incurred at Gibson Hospital in the amount of $229.85 and $129 professional fees, amounting to $350.85."

Please notice this draft is made payable jointly to you and Gibson Hospital, thereby honoring your executed assignment. When Bobby receives his additional medical treatment, please submit an attending physician's report along with all itemized statements. We will be happy then to further consider the benefits of his claim.

"It has been our pleasure to be of financial assistance to you. We trust Bobby is enjoying a rapid recovery and we would like to extend our best wishes."

Bobby suffered a serious break in his arm while playing on the school grounds but is recovering satisfactorily.

I want some good terraces that will be easy to cultivate and last a long time. This is what farmers are requesting when making application for terraces. The old system of terracing is not working. There is some cause for this. There is no place provided to dispose of the terrace water. Next the terraces are so crooked they are hard to cultivate with mechanized equipment. To have a good terracing system that will fit the land is to recognize the natural drainage pattern on the land. Where the water would normally go should be added down with an adaptable grass. These places are in draws and along the field borders. The waterways should be sodded before the terracing is done.

Grassed waterways serve several purposes. They protect the land from erosion, provide a good turning place, can be used as a field road, can be cut for hay or grazed, and dispose of excess terrace water. The ACP program shares a big part of the cost in establishing waterways. Some farmers cooperating with the Wiregrass Soil Conservation District establishing this spring are: Winston Mizon, Curtis George Bowers, Hanna community; N. B. Yancey, Brooklyn community; O. V. Rhodes, Perry's Store community; William Day, Kinston community; and D. J. Grimes, Curtis community.

—50 Years Ago—
For a number of years there has been considerable uncertainty in regard to the method of electing county commissioners in Coffee County. They have for a long time been elected from four districts. Some have contended that this is a custom, others have said it is a law, but nobody seems to know when it became law, or where it can be found. The matter has been the subject of a great deal of discussion, especially when commissioners are to be elected. The Clippier determined, if possible, to ascertain the legal status of the matter. A diligent search by a representative of the Clippier
in the volumes of the local acts of the Legislature resulted in the finding of an act passed by the Legislature of 1866-67 as follows: An act to give Coffee County four commissioners Districts, from each of which hereafter there shall be elected at every regular election one commissioner by the resident voters of the respective districts for which he may be elected, and further, if a vacancy occur in any district, the Court of County Commissioners shall order a special election to fill such vacancy. At the time this was enacted, Dr. J. G. Moore was representative from this county and Wm. H. Ashley of Sparta was State Senator from the district composed of Covington, Connecticut and Coffee Counties. The act was made official by the County Board of Commissioners

on May 1, 1871.

Has the "wonder" been knocked out of the wonder drugs? A shot of penicillin, once the answer to almost everything from boils to pneumonia, seems to have lost
some of the power in its Sunday
punch, a punch that used to mean finish for disease bacteria.
The truth is that although the antibiotics have been winning most of the rounds in the fight against disease, that fight isn't over yet.
Penicillin hasn't lost its punch,
but in some cases it might as well have, because a few germs have returned to the fight with iron jaws, something known to medical men as "bacterial resistance."
Penicillin, for example, used to be almost 100% effective against the staphylococci, a gang of germs
behind tonsillitis, pneumonia, boils and a rare enteritis similar to food poisoning. Now staphylo-coccus can be counted on against the drug only about 60% of the time.
How and why this happens is not completely known but it is generally agreed that both environment and heredity play important parts. Some germs which have fought a losing battle against the antibiotics do not pass

the handicap on to their offspring.
These new-born germs aren't so easily linked by the old methods.
So medical science tries new methods. Two or more drugs are tried together on the theory that if the germ can counter one it may fail to the other. Or the chemical structure of a drug is changed, as a fighter might switch from a right to a left. Another method is to use certain chemicals that "sensitize" the germs, making them groggy and easier to knock out.
One of the best methods is to bring in a new drug with a punch
the bacteria haven't learned to resist. One of these drugs is a new antibiotic, streptomycin, which is taking over in those cases where penicillin or other antibiotics have lost their effectiveness. For example, one researcher reported the new drug knocked out the staphylococcus 45 out of 50 times when penicillin fell down on the job 27 out of 50 times.

Editor's Note—Being a senior with all its attendant duties turned into a full-time job for Celia English who has been writing the high school news
so she has turned the duties of reporting school news for The Clippier over to Cornelia Ellis who makes her debut in this issue. This column was turned in last week but was crowded out of the paper.

Tuesday and Wednesday the annual "Who's Who" contest
was sponsored by the Beta Club.
Candidates for election were selected by popular vote out of each homeroom class. Names of being were mimeographed
by several high school students
on 300 ballot sheets but only 250 were purchased. Voting was average with 250 of about 550
registered students participating. Ballots were counted at the G. P. Miles home Tuesday night.
The contests were unusually close this year, some winners
being victorious by one or two votes.

A list of the winners was carried in last week's Clippier.

HAD YOUR MOTOR CHECKED LATELY?

Like most car owners you probably take pride in the way you keep your car. Yet the same people who will have their cars checked at the first sign of trouble let their bodies go indefinitely without attention, even though there may be danger signals.

Motors wear out faster if not properly cared for—so do bodies. Protect your health with regular check-ups, and when your doctor prescribes remedial medicines, bring your prescriptions here. You can always be sure that only the finest quality ingredients are used, that they will be compounded accurately, promptly.

...if only for THEIR sakes

...learn how to protect yourself from death from cancer. They need you!

And for your sake and theirs you must keep on remembering that the best cancer "insurance" is:

FIRST...to make a habit of periodic health check-ups no matter how well you may feel, always including a thorough examination of the skin, mouth, lungs and rectum and (for women) the breasts and generative tract.

SECOND...to learn the seven danger signals that may mean cancer, and go straight to the doctor at the first sign of any one of them—(1) Any sore that does not heal (2) A lump or thickening, in the breast or elsewhere (3) Unusual bleeding or discharge (4) Any change in a wart or mole (5) Persistent indigestion or difficulty in swallowing (6) Persistent hoarseness or cough (7) Any change in normal bowel habits.

For other life saving facts about cancer, phone the American Cancer Society office nearest you, or address your letter to "Cancer"—in care of your local Post Office.

STRENGTH FOR THESE DAYS

And he bearing His cross went forth into a place called the place of a skull, which is called in the Hebrew Golgotha. (St. John 19, 17)

Each of us has his own cross to bear, and too often we feel faint and put upon, sorry for ourselves instead of courageous. Jesus, for our salvation, gave up His life gladly; the thought of His sacrifice should strengthen us to bravely carry our small burdens.

OLD SPRINGER Daniels revealed in the dust and the hot air that beat against his leathery face, feeling good again just knowing that he was back on the job. He turned toward Slade Carter, the stock driver with hair the color of a flaming sunset.

"Nobody guessed I'd be settin' here again, Slade. But no rattled brain without can put Old Springer out of commission."
"You might think me for talking the boss into letting you ride guard," Carter said, chewing briskly on a wad of tobacco. "He claimed you're too old. Says he needs a man with faster reflexes. I told him you'd do. Least wise for the present. But next time you might get more than a crease in the skull. You know what we're carrying this trip, Springer?"

"I reckon I do," Springer answered. "Well, I'll refresh your memory." Slade said, checking the team a might as the wagon road narrowed slightly between the sand stone cliffs. "We got a pay roll load."

"You just drive this stage and let me handle the pay roll." The valley opened up in front of them. The wagon road stretched through the rich grazing land. Springer leaned back against the rocking seat. Winchester rested across his long legs. They had just cleared the hills when Springer, or up straight and smiled around in the seat almost the same instant the 45 sounded against the quiet day. Slade turned in time to see four riders pulling their ponies out of the wooded hillside.

"Maybe we can outrun them to Clear Springs," Slade shouted. "We'll never make it, Slade. Clear Springs is just too darn far away. His voice was as calm as his manner. "Them boys mean business. For the way they're riding, I reckon it's best we pull up and let them have what they're after, fore someone gets hurt." "You gone loco, Springer? You got a Winchester, use it!" "Don't forget, Slade, we got a boy and a Missus on this haul. If I fire at em they're goin' to open up."
"We lose this payroll, Springer, and you'll be taking your last run on this stage," Slade said angrily. Old Springer Daniels didn't answer Slade. He was busy sizing up the four men that circled the stage. Throw down the payroll bag under the seat, old timer, and we'll let you live another sixty years!"

"Much obliged to you," Springer said, tossing the canvas sack. "The rifle, now, old timer," the thin man ordered. The rider climbed down off his horse, picked up the bag and the Winchester, then mounted again. Springer and Slade watched the men disappear among the trees. Springer jerked Slade's arm. "Now get us to Clear Springs like the devil himself was after you. Don't spare the whip."

Springer sighed, a smile crossed his face. "Now, Slade that wasn't so bad. Nobody got hurt." "You turning yellow in your old age," Slade scowled. "Nope, jest gettin' smart and careful," Springer smiled. Mr. Clesson met the stage as Slade pulled to a stop in front of the station. "Ta! you made it all right, boys," Clesson was rubbing his puffy hands together. Springer's waiting in the office for the payroll."

Springer took a carpet bag from the woman and began digging under the knitted rug. "Your payroll's here, Mr. Clesson, all two thousand dollars worth." He handed her the bag and nodded thanks to the woman. "I made the switch at Twin Forks station while we were waiting for fresh horses. I had hunch the McGuire boys would be workin' this territory soon."

STATE OF ALABAMA COUNTY OF COFFEE
Default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness secured by that certain mortgage dated 16 December 1932, executed by George Morris, Nancy Morris, Nellie Morris, Sam Morris and Irma Morris, in to the NE 1/4 of SE 1/4 of Section 27, Township 6, Range 20, containing 40 acres, more or less, in Coffee County, Alabama, Said foreclosure sale shall be held in strict conformity with the legal hours of sale on Monday, 15 February 1934 the following described real estate conveyed in said mortgage as security for said mortgage debt, viz: All of the undivided interest

This 19th day of January 1934, J. W. MORROW, Mortgagee C. L. Rowe, Attorney for the mortgagee 233W Jun. 21-23-Feb. 4. —50 Years Ago—
On Friday and Saturday, J. B. McCrary and his assistant, Mr. Prambrough, were here completing the surveying for the waterworks. The site for the reservoir was located on the hill east of town, where a fall of 100

OLD SPRINGER Daniels revealed in the dust and the hot air that beat against his leathery face, feeling good again just knowing that he was back on the job. He turned toward Slade Carter, the stock driver with hair the color of a flaming sunset.

"Nobody guessed I'd be settin' here again, Slade. But no rattled brain without can put Old Springer out of commission."
"You might think me for talking the boss into letting you ride guard," Carter said, chewing briskly on a wad of tobacco. "He claimed you're too old. Says he needs a man with faster reflexes. I told him you'd do. Least wise for the present. But next time you might get more than a crease in the skull. You know what we're carrying this trip, Springer?"

"I reckon I do," Springer answered. "Well, I'll refresh your memory." Slade said, checking the team a might as the wagon road narrowed slightly between the sand stone cliffs. "We got a pay roll load."
"You just drive this stage and let me handle the pay roll." The valley opened up in front of them. The wagon road stretched through the rich grazing land. Springer leaned back against the rocking seat. Winchester rested across his long legs. They had just cleared the hills when Springer, or up straight and smiled around in the seat almost the same instant the 45 sounded against the quiet day. Slade turned in time to see four riders pulling their ponies out of the wooded hillside.

"Maybe we can outrun them to Clear Springs," Slade shouted. "We'll never make it, Slade. Clear Springs is just too darn far away. His voice was as calm as his manner. "Them boys mean business. For the way they're riding, I reckon it's best we pull up and let them have what they're after, fore someone gets hurt." "You gone loco, Springer? You got a Winchester, use it!" "Don't forget, Slade, we got a boy and a Missus on this haul. If I fire at em they're goin' to open up."

"We lose this payroll, Springer, and you'll be taking your last run on this stage," Slade said angrily. Old Springer Daniels didn't answer Slade. He was busy sizing up the four men that circled the stage. Throw down the payroll bag under the seat, old timer, and we'll let you live another sixty years!"

"Much obliged to you," Springer said, tossing the canvas sack. "The rifle, now, old timer," the thin man ordered. The rider climbed down off his horse, picked up the bag and the Winchester, then mounted again. Springer and Slade watched the men disappear among the trees. Springer jerked Slade's arm. "Now get us to Clear Springs like the devil himself was after you. Don't spare the whip."

Springer sighed, a smile crossed his face. "Now, Slade that wasn't so bad. Nobody got hurt." "You turning yellow in your old age," Slade scowled. "Nope, jest gettin' smart and careful," Springer smiled. Mr. Clesson met the stage as Slade pulled to a stop in front of the station. "Ta! you made it all right, boys," Clesson was rubbing his puffy hands together. Springer's waiting in the office for the payroll."

Springer took a carpet bag from the woman and began digging under the knitted rug. "Your payroll's here, Mr. Clesson, all two thousand dollars worth." He handed her the bag and nodded thanks to the woman. "I made the switch at Twin Forks station while we were waiting for fresh horses. I had hunch the McGuire boys would be workin' this territory soon."

PEANUT CONTROLS NOT GOOD

This year, as they have for the past several years, farmers and landowners in Coffee County approved government price supports on their peanut crop and its consequent limitations on acreage. Generally, the attitude of local farmers is that it is better to be guaranteed a profit on a limited crop than it is to gamble on the fluctuations of a free market.

Artificial price supports and interference with the law of supply and demand can lead to nothing but grief in later years. A good example of what happens to commodities under price supports can be seen in the dairy industry with its butter surplus. Oleo took the butter market with a less expensive product. The butter producers leaned on government props so long they lost the ability to produce that is necessary to survive in this economy, and they lost their market.

The same thing can happen to peanut growers and processors. Instead of trying to live within government acreage allotments and price supports every effort should be made to get out from under them. Farmers growing peanuts and plants processing them should analyze their market and make a concentrated effort to boost the sales of their products. How many times have you seen a peanut oil ad in a nationally-circulated magazine or peanut oil promoted in a degree anywhere like the popular brands of shortening?

What are the per capita sales of peanut oil in Colorado and California compared to Alabama and Georgia? If the sales in some states are far lower than in others, why wouldn't a concentrated sales promotion effort bring up the consumption of peanut oil? It is time for the producers and processors of peanuts to try to expand their market.

Next harvest season a certain amount of money from every ton of peanuts sold should be put into a fund by the growers to help finance a study of potential markets. Then a concentrated sales effort should be made in the most promising areas. The cooperation of the processors through such a program might lead to an expanding market for peanut products and the eventual casting off of the stagnating effect of government controls.

COMMUNITY CONCERT MEMBERSHIP
A dinner at the First Baptist Church in Enterprise Monday night launched that city's drive for members in their Community Concert group that brings good music and other fine entertainment to our sister city in Coffee County. Elba itself is not large enough to support a series of entertainers of the caliber that sign contracts for Community Concert appearances. However, that should not stop local people who are interested in good music from joining forces with Enterprise.

A $6.00 membership entitles the holder to admission to the concerts held in Enterprise. Last season three different groups of entertainers were seen and heard. For those who enjoy good music, ballet dancing, good choral singing or concert musicians, it is a good opportunity to hear them close to home. In Elba Mrs. George Lamar Collier, Miss Gladys Clark and Mrs. Paul Cunningham have membership applications. No admissions to single concerts are sold. Admittance is by membership only.

Griswold Seeks Legislative Position

In the political announcement section of The Clipper this week E. O. (O'Neal) Griswold, of Enterprise, announces his candidacy for election as Representative in the State Legislature for Coffee County. In making a statement for publication Mr. Griswold said:

"At the outset you are entitled to know something of my qualifications for the office I seek. I was born and reared in Coffee County and attended the public schools here, graduating from high school. Later I attended the University of Alabama, receiving my A. B. and law degrees in 1941. Since that time, with the exception of 19 months in the armed forces during WW II, I have practiced law in Coffee and adjoining counties.

"In the legislature I shall work for more farm-to-market roads in this county, higher old age pensions, better welfare benefits, and the like. I shall also work for more industrial facilities, a full time school for Coffee County.

"I shall oppose additional taxes and fully believe that these things can be accomplished by conservation without additional taxation.

"I shall work for more industrial facilities for Coffee County and wholeheartedly oppose a pavilion for the state capitol building. I am in the legislature, I shall be glad to have your views on any legislation that may arise affecting the people of the state as a whole, and especially the citizens of Coffee County."

Engram D. Harrelson, 51-year-old farmer of Antioch community, died Saturday in a hospital from injuries sustained the previous Monday. He was struck by a tree which fell on him while he was working in his field.

GROUND HOG SEES SHADOW
The ground hog saw his shadow Tuesday, at least in Elba, so it is supposed that the pesky critter scurried back into his hole and we are in for six weeks more of winter weather.

It is difficult to understand how an animal which does not inhabit this area can control the weather, but there's no point in arguing against its tradition.

According to an old Indian tradition which was first observed in Pennsylvania 65 years ago, the groundhog's fear of his shadow must be reckoned with. Thousands of persons who were born on Feb. 2 have organized Groundhog Clubs in many states and the day is celebrated in a big way with picnics, family reunions and what have you?

County Corn Yield Increase Possible

An average increase of 10 bushels of corn per acre in Coffee County would increase the farm income $97,500 at present prices. M. M. Woodham, Geneva, County farm agent told farmers and business men in Enterprise on Tuesday night. Over 250 farmers from the county were invited to the meeting at Hillcrest Hotel by the Elba and Basin Farmers Association in an effort to increase the yield of the corn crop.

The good time to plant corn is from April 25 to May 5, he said by putting the seed in the field at this time, the corn will mature in July which has the heaviest rain of a year production month. Planting too early, from the middle of March to the middle of April, will have the corn maturing during June, the heaviest rain of a year production month with the least rain. Corn needs moisture and water when it starts to mature.

A study of insects and knowledge of how to combat them along with high fertilization are two more essential points for high corn yield.

In Alabama, the average yield per acre is about 20 bushels. In Pennsylvania, it is 45. It is possible to average year in and year out, from 55 to 60 bushels of corn per acre, Mr. Woodham said. If proper planting procedure is followed, fertilization done properly, insects controlled and cultivation done correctly, the Coffee County corn yield would not be below the state average.

Burning off fields was also decreed by the farm agent. Crop residue worked into the soil is a help in holding moisture from the wet months for the dry period experienced during May and June.

SOUTH WIND BRINGS FREEZE
John Taylor said he saw something last Wednesday morning that beat anything he ever saw before. Tuesday was quite warm but a strong March-like wind from the South blew all day in a disagreeable way.

It blew from that direction all night but contrary to weather reports, the temperature in Elba dropped to 36 degrees by Wednesday morning. Mr. Taylor said he can't remember such unorthodox weather behavior before. The wind shifted to the north Wednesday and that morning's freeze was followed by two more freezing and frosty mornings.

Rash of Fires Plague City and County

WOOD FIRE DAMAGE HIGH

A woods fire which started on Clark's Hill, west of the Pine Tax or home on the Opp highway last Wednesday afternoon, burned over a wide territory before being brought under control.

Robert Smith, county forester, said it was one of the most damaging fires in several years. It was on land owned by W. O. Bailey, Mrs. W. H. Coston, Mrs. Maggie Garrett, John Rushing, Flack Lumber Co. and Lister Brunson.

Mr. Smith said he was encouraged by the time cooperation given by 30 volunteers and the Elba fire department which was on the scene in case buildings in the area caught fire.

Mr. Smith said the forestry department fought seven wild fires last week, five of them on Wednesday. Savings were estimated by Mr. Smith at well over $5,000.

C & S LUMBER HAS FIRE
A boiler house at the C & S Lumber Co. was damaged by a blaze Tuesday afternoon. Shavings from the planer mill had ignited and the building was burning fiercely when firemen arrived. Elba Seeking Cage Tournery for District

Sam J. Casey superintendent of city schools and Coach Frank Buckner are representing Elba at the Second District basketball meeting Wednesday night at Enterprise. The meeting will determine which district will be the host for the district tournament.

These schools are trying to attract the district championship and Elba. Coach Buckner said he and Mr. Casey are confident of their chances with arguments that Elba is centrally located, has a large and well-equipped gymnasium and a large team are filling the house at most games.

There are 23 votes in the district so 12 are needed for a majority. Dothan had the A majority last year but is located on the edge of the district. Lumber has a new gymnasium but has no date the tourney but has to be able to draw good crowds compared to Elba.
